

GREG MURRAY & THE SEVEN WONDERS ELECTRONIC PRESS KIT

Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders fuses the twang of Americana, with latino, with 'death country', with brash and anthemic choruses, soaring into the sky, with the help of rousing brass, played at one hundred miles per hour. There is Springsteen, Arcade Fire, The Waterboys, Calexico, Van Morrison, all with a slight Irish tinge. They bring something different to the gunfight with a totally original brand of sincere, positive, heart-warming, life-affirming, heart-felt, hugely majestic, blend of music - making an incredible carnival of a live show.

& THE SEVEN
WONDERS

Picture an Irish man, the Irish humor, wit, and marvelous twists of language, all sprinkled with the tears of angels.

Surround him with a brotherhood of passionate musicians and then let them take you on a musical roller-coaster ride full of elevating positive energy.

From beautiful heart-torn ballads to ethereal choral anthemic choruses with uplifting piano-infused hooks, their music has often been described as having American folk, 'Tex-Mex' tinged influences!

Greg and the Wonders deliver brazen barn dances, ballads, dramatic Americana, graceful-indie-rock and pop, and reggae-folk , all sprinkled with added seasoning from sparkling keys, banjo, lapsteel guitar and mandolin!

Add the fact that virtually every member of the band sings and it's no surprise that their shows create a fantastic live atmosphere with melodies that will stay with you long after the show is over!

SINGLE REVIEW "MYSTERY MACHINE" (OCTOBER 18, 2023)

Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders' NEW SINGLE 'Mystery Machine' - Guest review by Captain's Bar events manager, 'Say Something' Music label owner and promoter Scott Evans

Despite its namesake, the latest single from Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders – "Mystery Machine" – has nothing to do with the iconic van in the Scooby Doo cartoon, but instead is one from the band's extensive back catalogue and a longstanding live show 'sign off' that has finally been released as a record. "I always firmly believed that it should have been our first single," said Greg – the frontman of this wonderfully cheerful band that defies genre. "The reason, not possibly, being that some people just don't get us," he added.

Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders are a spectacle to behold, like the Great Wall of China or Petra. The eight-piece Irish/Americana indie rock supergroup fuses the twang of Americana, with Latino, with 'death country', with brash and anthemic choruses, all played at 100 miles an hour with more enthusiasm than an eight-year-old at Alton Towers. "We're the band with guitar riffs, keys riffs, brass riffs, harmonica, squeezebox, harmonies, all thrown into the mix on many songs with aplomb. I try to reflect the positivity of the lyrics with the positivity of the musicality and seldom hold back," Greg continues.

Mystery Machine does anything but hold back, and feels like the perfect track to sum up everything that Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders is about. The track bursts to life with a vibrant arrangement before it's met with Greg's charming vocals and vivacious energy as he describes the ups and downs of human existence in the most life-affirming way. "I love a good out-of-focus, cryptic lyric/title, which comes clear when you take the listener through the journey of what's going on in the songwriters' head," Greg tells The Leopard. "So to put you out of your misery of just wondering what or who the 'Mystery Machine' is; let me tell you – we all have one and how we use it is up to us...it's our heart – not the physical muscle that we all have, pumping blood around our bodies, but the mysterious machine that influences and motivates us to feel, love and express ourselves every moment of every day."

A lyrical rollercoaster, listeners strap in as Greg describes the habit of getting caught up in life's daily grind and how we can often forget to live for the day or to stop and smell the roses. There are moments of ultimate pessimism in the pre-chorus, but this is simply to provide the momentum required to reach the soaring heights of the chorus which vibrates with optimism lyrically, vocally and musically, mirroring the ups and downs of life itself. The instrumentation is a carnival, boasting guitar riffs, keys and brass, in the band's usual brash and optimistic grandeur, continuing to evade categorisation with a sound that is distinctive and unique to the band.

Heart-warming and sincere life advice delivered at breakneck pace, Mystery Machine is yet another track that makes you want to laugh, dance and sing. Emerging as a beacon of positivity, it's the sonic equivalent of the Latin phrase Carpe Diem, with Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders delivering its message to anyone who is willing to hear it. It's a song that advocates for faith, hope and love, serving as an encouragement to take risks and never live in regret, reminding us that 'the good outweighs the bad, most of the time'. "Go on, take that chance, for you never know when anything like it will ever come along again," – James Gregory Murray. ## SINGLE REVIEW "WISH I WAS IN LOVE WITH YOU" AND "THE PAIN & GLORY" (NOVEMBER 22, 2023)

Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders' latest dual-release sees band 'at its peak' - Guest review by Captain's Bar events manager, 'Say Something' Music label owner and promoter Scott Evans

Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders are a special part of the Stoke-on-Trent music scene – there really are no other bands like them. Their music is often uplifting whilst at the same time, deliver lyrics that are heartfelt and heart-breaking in equal measure. Their latest double release encapsulates that juxtaposition perfectly. "Wish I Was In Love With You" and "The Pain & Glory" are two very well crafted songs showing two very different sides of the band.

At their heart, Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders has an Americana sound, but there are many different elements embedded within that, that they shouldn't be pigeon holed as such. There are parts of the sound which remind me of They Might Be Giants, Prefab Sprout and Crowded House, all of which also had that ability to deliver big anthemic chorus songs whilst delivering an emotional punch.

Wish I Was In Love With You is an up-tempo song with instantly catchy melodies, and similar to the aforementioned Crowded House, the band have a way of making a song feel so familiar to you that you are singing along by the end of the chorus. The production is wonderful allowing each element of the band to shine through. By the second verse the combination of plucked guitar, strummed guitar, brass stab and electric guitar chord are so perfectly intertwined, it's a really clever arrangement. The chorus brings it all together perfectly, uplifting and joyous. I would imagine it will be a very popular live song. There is no doubt this is the sound of a band working together really well.

Meanwhile, "The Pain & Glory" is a stark contrast, being very much a ballad. There is so much going on musically – acoustic led with a gorgeous lap steel guitar layered throughout. A beautiful string accompaniment ushers in the chorus and then lyrically this is where Greg grabs you by the heart strings with "The beautiful thing about love is..." This is such a heartfelt track which Greg wrote for his wife following a personal loss. Although musically very different from its accompanying song it does again show how good the writing and musicianship is within the band. "The Pain & Glory"/"Wish I Was In Love With You" is a double single released by a band at their peak. The song writing is of a really high standard worthy of a big audience. I look forward to what the band may have in store for 2024. Read the review here: <https://theleopard.com/greg-murray-seven-wonders-dual-single/>

REVIEW OF "ONLY AT CHRISTMAS...THE BELLS RING ON" (NOVEMBER 30, 2023)

Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders have us feeling festive with new Christmas single (Guest review by Captain's Bar events manager, Say Something Music label owner and promoter Scott Evans)

What's the point of a Christmas Song? Growing up in the late 70s early 80s Christmas songs were a staple part of the year, who was going to take the coveted number one spot knowing their song would be immortalised forever, to be dragged out and inflicted on a Christmas shoppers for far too many weeks. But let's be honest we loved them! Even now hearing Slade's anthem can still bring you warm memories of happy simpler times when having the latest Han Solo figure meant the world. And then it all changed. The 'X factor' stepped in and ensured that the festive feel of the Christmas number one was gone, yes Simon Cowell was in fact the Grinch, and now Spotify wrapped tries to fill that hole that Christmas songs used to fill.

So it's with a pleasant surprise that Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders deliver their second single in as many weeks. Hot on the tails of the superb double release Wish I Was In Love With You and The Pain & Glory comes the festive Only At Christmas...The Bells Ring On. The song has everything you would expect and want from a Christmas single, from the second the song begins those sleigh bells are ringing. As with the latest releases the song feels instantly recognisable, it has a steady rhythm that doesn't give up and only builds as the song progresses. Throughout the song there are simple but effective horns, lovely vocal harmonies and backing vocals, none more effective than in the ear worm of a chorus. All the things that come to mind when you hear a Christmas song are there – you can imagine school children singing it on the last day of term's extended assembly, or it being the closing happy moment of a Christmas film. So the point of a Christmas song? It's to take you away just for a fleeting moment from the horrors of the world and cement happy memories of family, friends, eating too much, the double issue of the radio times, proper snow, circling toys in the catalogue and hoping that you might just get that Han Solo figure. Hats off to Greg and his talented band for delivering this well-crafted Christmas song and gifting a little bit of happiness. Let the Bells Ring On!

Bethan, founder of The Leopheard added: "Ah well it truly does feel like Christmas now that Greg Murray and the Seven Wonders have graced us with a jingle bell, holiday infused festive feast for the ears. Whether you're a Buddy the Elf or an Ebenezer Scrooge, there's no doubt this heart-warming record will be the perfect soundtrack for putting up the Christmas tree and enjoying a mulled wine. With its bags of brass, bells and harmonies, this seasonal single is sure to but a smile on your face and spread some holiday cheer, which is often all that's needed this time of year."

SINGLE REVIEW "ALWAYS FOR LOVE" (FEBRUARY 14, 2024)

Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders mature pop perfection - 'All For Love' (Guest review by Captain's Bar events manager, Say Something Music label owner and promoter Scott Evans)

The prolific Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders are back with yet another song, following the five singles from last year and a planned single-a-month for 2024. Does this plan lead to a drop in quality? Especially after last year's superb When I Was In Love With You and The Pain & Glory? Of course not!

Always For Love is another slice of perfected mature pop. Previously I have compared the band to Crowded House and They Might Be Giants, and that is to say they fall into that ilk of 90s artists who put out great commercial songs that were successful without having to compromise the sound they wanted.

Always for Love starts out with a lovely rumbling piano before tumbling straight into upbeat cacophony of music and instruments that have now become synonymous with the Greg Murray sound. Stabbing Memphis horns pierce the sound over a pumping drum and bass and it's one of those songs that you are so familiar with by the end that you are either singing, dancing or both – and that is a talent that Greg & co have perfected. The surprise twist comes at the end when Shimmer Johnson – a female singer songwriter based in Edmonton Canada – joins the party with her belting soulful voice and the song takes on a more gospel sound to it. It's a great inclusion to the song and closes the track well. Shimmer Johnson has had successes in her own right collaborating with some big songwriters and her husband Corey is a music producer and is responsible for all the production of Greg's songs for the last couple of years in his Canadian based studio. Listeners can expect a year full of new Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders material and if the quality remains this high, it can only be a good thing. I personally look forward to catching some rip-roaring live shows this summer, I'll get my dancing shoes on. Released February 9, listen to 'All For Love' by Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders NOW!

SINGLE REVIEW "TRUST ME WITH YOUR LIFE" (APRIL 3, 2024)

Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders deliver third uplifting single of 2024 'Trust Me With Your Life' (Guest review by Captain's Bar events manager, Say Something Music label owner and promoter Scott Evans)

The ever prolific Greg Murray is back again, and once more shows his ability to write a perfectly formed up-tempo track. 'Trust Me With Your Life' is a life affirming brass infused crowd chanting chorus of a song with meaningful lyrics and heart; as Greg puts it "an attempt to give a nod to the injustices in life but trying to keep things optimistic" as demonstrated in the opening verse "And someone is to blame for what we've done, the promises keep coming till we've won".

As we have now come to expect with a Murray song the brass is very prevalent, this time it kicks off the song in style, very much setting the uplifting feel of the song.

During the verse there is a really interesting ukulele break puncturing each line, this is quite unusual but works really well, and I absolutely adore the half tempo pre-chorus with its subtle piano and guitar line under the lyric "Holy shit I've made a mess of it, I've torn out your heart and let it sit" before delivering the upbeat, danceable course.

One of the things I really like about Greg Murray and his band is that they write songs in a quite unconventional manner that most artists avoid nowadays, a good example of this is the song, finishing with almost a minute of instrumental, this must work really well in a live environment and it's just really nice to hear on the studio recording showing the band are not compromising on their songs just to fit in with a Spotify trend.

I'm sure by the time this review is published, Greg and co will already be preparing for the next release. (Just checked, yep – 'Who Would Have Thought Of Sending Flowers' will be out on Friday 26th April). It's going to be interesting to see by the end of the year all of the songs collected together in what would be a really strong album. In the meantime, do all you can to catch Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders live for this is where they will truly shine.

LIVE SHOW REVIEWS

Greg Murray & The Seven Wonders stuns Artisan Tap - Review by Bethan Shufflebotham 02.03.23

I love an unconventional gig and what's more non-conformist than a pub decorated with dismembered dolls, a spoken word poet and an eight-piece Irish/Americana indie rock supergroup? On Thursday evening, I headed back to Artisan Tap following a stellar Camp Stag gig a few weeks back, to catch James Gregory Murray and The Seven Wonders, otherwise known as Greg Murray and The Seven Wonders, or GM7W – and it was wonder they promised, and wonder they certainly delivered.

Born in Northern Ireland but settled in Stoke-on-Trent, Greg Murray picked up his first guitar at the age of 14 and put it straight back down again, but growing up around live music sessions in his dad's bar listening to his family singing and playing Irish favourites, it was no surprise that he soon picked up the string instrument once more. Greg's discography spans some 20 years now, and over the years he has recruited a fantastic band of musicians, which he leads with charisma and Northern Irish charm.

It's the band's first time playing The Artisan Tap, though you'd never have thought it. They looked comfortable on the comically small stage as they held inside jokes with friends and family in the audience, a string of fairy lights illuminating the vocalist's face. They kicked off the night with Love As If, followed by Pretend They Love You and If You Love Me Let Me Know. If we were in a pub quiz, one might ask what links these tracks, but it's obvious. It was felt all around that cosy, quirky pub. After a personal loss, Greg channeled the negative emotions in his life into something that he could manage and cope with, which is so beautifully reflected in their music, their lyrics filled with faith, and melodies of positivity. It almost felt biblical at times, the congregation having gathered to share in this wondrous experience.

Greg has a simply stunning way with words, brought to life by the menagerie of musicians beside him, influenced by a number of genres from Americana and Latino, to alternative indie rock, but each and every one of them has this Irish twang that makes it feel like a jig, and it's impossible not to tap your toes to. From ballads to barn-dances, 'death country' to reggae folk, it'd be redundant to say that they're the best at what they do, because I'm not sure anyone else does it.

People laughed, listened and danced to uplifting heart-warming melodies and life-affirming lyrics as glasses steamed up and beers were sunk, you really can't help but feel the message of love and light that radiates from the soundwaves they produce. Earnest and emotional, heartfelt and awe-inspiring, Greg Murray and The Seven Wonders fostered an other-worldly warm glow of an atmosphere at The Artisan Tap. If I didn't know before, I know how they got their name now.

I've been to a number of gigs where you might find yourself watching the clock wondering when that final track may come after only 45 minutes, but at Artisan Tap, the energy was just something else, and as I looked around the room and the music lovers fully immersed in the music, hearts well and truly full, I realized that I was witness to something incredibly special.
